Few words about the festival

Brussels Games Festival is dedicated to games in all their forms and, especially to make people sensitive to game play for all the citizens regardless of age, sex, social status or origin. This is a festive event but it is also civic and educational. Brussels Games festival enhances the social, human and relational dimension.

Festival is nonstop 32-hour festival, including an "IN" program during the daytime and an "OFF" one during the night. All types of games will be there, reflecting the great diversity of current playing creation: communication games, party games, family games, strategy and management gaming, games from the world, full-size playground, Mōlkky championship, meetings with games editors and designers... There will be something for any taste and any generation.

Volunteers' tasks

Beside the dates of the festival, volunteers may have to collect material, store, assemble and disassemble facilities, give back material and prepare the stands.

During festival, volunteers will be in charge of welcoming people, catering, entertainment for games activities, or inform visitors about the festival... depending on their skills.

Accommodation

Volunteers will stay with local volunteers or Belgian families as couch surfers. A sleeping bag is requested. You must have pocket money to eat in the evening (around 5/8€).

Food

Organizers will provide a meal every 6 hours of working as well as drink for hydration. Your managers will make sure to balance your schedule in order to breathe and enjoy the festival.

Number of volunteers required

Brussels Games Festival is looking for 12 volunteers (two of them will be team leaders) with a minimum age of 18.

Volunteer profile

Festival is looking for pleasant and punctual volunteers who are interested in playing a full part in Festival preparation and like game universe. It is preferable if you know role-playing games and you are able to explain them. All languages are welcomed but you must speak at least one language between these three: English, French and Dutch.
